This easy trek wanders along mountain streams and through wooded forests that open to the breathtaking backdrop of the Himalayas themselves justifying its popularity among Westerners and Nepalese alike. A sense of closeness to nature is paired with a cultural touch as you are invited into beautiful ethnic villages for dining and lodging among local people creating an International exchange that is priceless in itself. The Ghorepani is not far from Kathmandu, and directly offered out of Pokhara. It involves no technical climbing and no risk for altitude sickness. It is accessible late August through mid June.
